"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a young girl 21, and have been keeping company with a young gether about two years and parted. We have been parted pretty nearly a year. I tried everything to win him back. He often comes in and tells me he loves me, but it doesn't seem to me that he does. When we went together he didn't drink, but he does now. and it has cost me a lot of worry. He is a good, honest boy, also a good worker. No matter what he does, I still love him and don't want anyone but him. Dear Mrs. Lee,

I am afraid I haven't much to suggest, dear. All you can do is comes to see you and trust that time will work it out. It certainly is too bad he drinks, but there never is any use talking about such a habit. He will simply have to be convinced that it is doing him harm and stop of his own will.

Mrs. Lee, it is good manners to send flowers to a boy friend who is sick, and would they be appreciated? What traits in a girl attract young men the most? "Bonnie Blue Eyes."

Such a lot of question, Blue Eyes. If the young man is not interested in you, you had better try to interest yourself in some one else, I should think. By petting I mean the promiscuous hugging and kissing. If you know the boys well enough it is all to make him welcome when he right to invite them to parties that involve expense to them, even if you have not "dated" with them. It is perfectly all right to send flowers to boy friends who are sick if you are very good friends —not otherwise—and they would probably be appreciated.

EULOGY DELIVERED BY FESS AT WILLIS FUNERAL TUESDAY

Following is the eulogy delivered by U. S. Senator S. D. Fess, Yellow Springs, at the funeral services for his colleague, U. S. Senator Frank B. Willis at Delaware Tuesday afternoon

In the midst of life we are surrounded by death. The moments of greatest rejoicing are turned into deepest sorrowing.

But life after all is not measured by numbers of years lived, but in deeds done, purposes stimulated, lives inspired.

Tested by those standards Frank Willis achieved great success. He is a splendid example for every aspiring boy and girl of our time and his success will ever be an abiding inspiration of the youth of His career is a ladder of fame up which young men and women of spirit will aspire to climb.

As a student he displayed studious habits, a keen mind, an onnivorous reader, an absorbing itstener. He was all eyes and ears to things political and at an early stage he displayed a taste for public service. Brilliant in the exact sciences, such as mathematics, his tastes were history and political science, in which fields he excelled. The college literary society was a forum for the exercise of his talent for debate and oratory. In this field of college activity he took the lead. His keen mind was supplemented by a wonderful speaking voice, a fine presence, and an agreeable disposition, which combined to command recognition and opened the way for a public career for which he seemed to be training. These dominating traits were soon many others soon to be taken. From the state legislature he stepped in the national legislature as a member of the lower house of congress for which his training had peculiarly fitted him.

From this field he was promoted to the governorship of his state for

The range of his personal acquaintance was not only very wide, but his talent for names and faces was most unusual. This feature, together with a strong personality, made him peculiarly popular with the rank and file. No man better understood the psychology of the crowd, As a campaigner he was unexcelled, as a vote getter he was masterful.

His traits of character were those which dominate public life. He took a high plane on questions with a moral background. While not a member of church until middle manhood, he was always deeply religious. His nature was profoundly spiritual. He naturally viewed public questions from a moral rather than constitutional If a position was constitutionally in doubt, but clearly moral, he did not hesitate to take his place on the moral side as he

Those who dif fered from him both in and out of his party held him the greatest esteem. This is shown by the atti tude of the minority party they

After a life filled with the fruits of what the world called success and at the end of what might be called a perfect day at home among friends and those who knew you when a boy and loved you and aspired for you, to lay down life's burdens without a pain of mind or body were it mine to choose the occasion that would be my choice.
